FOREWORD

IT is fitting that music, the one supremely emotional art, should have been chosen by David as the enduring expression of a religion which is the unfailing emotional resort of the human temperament.

The history of hymns begins before David: Zoroaster, Confucius, and Buddha had lived, and a religion without hymns is inconceivable, even if it be one that has its roots deep in the profitable soil of philosophical thought. But it is the hymnody beginning at the time of David with which this book has to do. It was he who first made religious songs for the worship of God and put them to tunes, and it was Ezra who took up the work where David left it off. From the day of those great Jews until now the volume of sacred song and tune has been added to in every quarter of the earth. What David did in a manner comprehensible to those of his time, Martin Luther did for another people; Watts and Wesley for still another and modified group of Christians; and finally a very modern spirituality has been reflected by Moody and Sankey. It is interesting to compare David and Ezra with Moody and Sankey.

A true hymn is made of several defined and perfectly recognized elements, and the first of these is reverence. Then we must have sublimity of expression rather than commonplaces which, in their relation to the subject, become vulgarities; and these things, together with fervor, are none of them inconsistent with great simplicity of expression. When imagery is used it must be of the highest sort else the result is buffoonery.

It would be impossible to include all the hymns of the world worthy to be recalled, but so far as space and an incomplete judgment permit, the hymns that have endured longest and meant most in Christian religious history have been included.

David's hymns speak of the Oriental, sensuous necessity for something superhuman. Luther's speak of a sublime resistance, ordered by an heroic conscience. Watts' of a gentler moment, when the emotions demanded rest and soothing.

During the interregnum between Watts and Moody, there came the lugubrious, unadjusted Puritan, less religious than fanatic, and his songs were neither pregnant with meaning, suggestive of spirituality, nor remotely beautiful. In all times there have been exceptions to the rule which directs attention to the prevailing fashion of feeling, but for the most part the above outline is correct.

The most powerful hymn tunes are of the early Christian time, — perhaps in the fifth, and again in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. The "Ancient Plain-Song," although its words are somewhat apochryphal to the present generation, is a fine example of great hymn-writing. Its marvellous transitions from major to minor, its limited register, its simplicity of tune-idea, — all its elements suggest the truly inspirational.

Bach and Händel, Haydn and Beethoven swell the list with Heavenly sounds, and Mendelssohn comes afterwards with his somewhat thin melodiousness, telling of the paucity of his musical ideas, but very sweet and beautiful and always legitimate, in frequent combination with Wesleyan feeling. We cannot think of the modern composers, such as Sir Arthur Sullivan and Gounod, — beautiful as much of their music is, — as makers of hymns. They were simply makers of some very beautiful music put to sacred words.

The adaptation of secular airs and of operatic fancies to sacred uses is often very happy in its results, and these have been popularly accepted as hymns because they have been attached to words of a sentimentally sacred character, or because they are fascinating as music, though without special hymn quality.

The extraordinary irregularity of congregational singing used to be due largely to the fact that hymns were written without signature and everybody sang to the time he knew best; he seemed to try that which he knew worst. It is very remarkable that congregations should have pulled through at all under the circumstances.

There is a reason which stands above all mortal analysis for the inclusion of certain hymns. Who, having lived within the time of their universal use, or within the time of that generation which knew them, would forget certain hymns which have become ours through sentimental affinity? When Antioch, Boylston, Coronation, Olivet shall be forgotten, even by the least superstitious of minds, then the little child shall have ceased to love his mother's arms, women shall no longer find time to love their children, and maybe we shall fall to despoiling the graves of our ancestors.

Time and the Hour can make sacred even that which may have no element of individuality to commend it, and those old hymns are by no means lacking in sincerity, sublimity, and the promise of hope, — those elements which compose great hymns.

HYMNS EVERY CHILD SHOULD KNOW

(Eventide)

"Abide with us, for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent."

Henry Francis Lyte, an obscure Devonshire parson, wrote this hymn when he was fifty-four years old. He wrote the words after a sermon, one September Sunday, when he was very weak and ill, and he died soon after. His last words were, "Peace, joy!" This is one of the three hymns which are the favorites of tramps; the other two are of the same confiding, hopeful character. Tramps seem to have no affinity for "Hold the Fort" and other militant songs of the church.

4 Hymns Every Child Should Know

Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day;
 Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away;
 Change and decay in all around I see;
 O Thou, Who changest not, abide with me.

I need Thy Presence every passing hour;
 What but Thy grace can foil the tempter's power?
 Who like Thyself my guide and stay can be?
 Through cloud and sunshine, LORD, abide with me.

I fear no foe with Thee at hand to bless;
 Ills have no weight, and tears no bitterness.
 Where is death's sting? Where, Grave, thy victory?
 I triumph still, if Thou abide with me.

Hold Thou Thy Cross before my closing eyes; Shine through the gloom, and point me to the skies;
 Heav'n's morning breaks, and earth's vain shadows flee;
 In life, in death, O LORD, abide with me.

According to Thy Gracious Word

(Dedham)

"Do this in remembrance of me."

This hymn was first named from the text from which it was taken, "Do this in remembrance of me." It is one of Montgomery's finest paraphrases on sacred lines. The author compiled a book of them which he called "Original Hymns," which are peculiarly comprehensive and applicable to their texts. Montgomery was called "the Cowper of the nineteenth century," but he hardly deserved the honor, although many of his verses are excellent for their purpose.

Thy body, broken for my sake,
 My bread from Heaven shall be;
 Thy testamental cup I take,
 And thus remember Thee.

Gethsemane can I forget?
 Or there Thy conflict see,
 Thine agony and bloody sweat,
 And not remember Thee?

When to the Cross I turn mine eyes,
 And rest on Calvary,
 O LAMB of GOD, my sacrifice!
 I must remember Thee —

Remember Thee and all Thy pains
 And all Thy love to me;
 Yea, while a breath, a pulse remains,
 Will I remember Thee.

And when these failing lips grow dumb,
 And mind and memory flee,
 When Thou shalt in Thy Kingdom come,
 Then, LORD, remember me.

A Few More Years Shall Roll

(Chalvey)

"The time is short."

Dr. Bonar was born in Edinburgh, in 1808, and he was ever known as the gentlest of men. His hymns demonstrate this and sustain his reputation, also, for hopefulness. He confided to a friend that he had no record nor much remembrance of how or when his many hymn-verses had been written, but he believed he had done most of them in railway carriages. The original title of this one was, "A Pilgrim's Song," and it had six stanzas.

Dr. H. BONAR (1842).

Rev. Dr. HAYNE.

A few more suns shall set
O'er these dark hills of time,
And we shall be where suns are not,
A far serener clime:
Then, O my LORD, prepare
My soul for that bright day;
Oh, wash me in Thy precious Blood,
And take my sins away.

A few more storms shall beat
On this wild rocky shore,
And we shall be where tempests cease,
And surges swell no more:
Then, O my LORD, prepare
My soul for that calm day;
Oh, wash me in Thy precious Blood,
And take my sins away.

A few more struggles here,
A few more partings o'er,
A few more toils, a few more tears,
And we shall weep no more:
Then, O my LORD, prepare
My soul for that bright day;
Oh, wash me in Thy precious Blood,
And take my sins away.

'T is but a little while
 And He shall come again,
 Who died that we might live, Who lives
 That we with Him may reign :
 Then, O my LORD, prepare
 My soul for that glad day ;
 Oh, wash me in Thy precious Blood,
 And take my sins away.

We gath - er in these hal - lowed walls ;

And ves - per hymn and ves - per prayer

Rise min - gling on the ho - ly air.

May struggling hearts that seek release
Here find the rest of God's own peace;
And, strengthened here by hymn and prayer,
Lay down the burden and the care.

O God, our light! to Thee we bow;
Within all shadows standest Thou;
Give deeper calm than night can bring;
Give sweeter songs than lips can sing.

Life's tumult we must meet again,
We cannot at the shrine remain;
But in the spirit's secret cell
May hymn and prayer forever dwell.

All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name

(Coronation)

This hymn, which may be called extraordinary for several reasons, was published years after it was written. For five years afterwards it was known as Perronet's composition. There is a thrilling story attached to its history: an itinerant preacher known as "Billy Dawson," a farmer from Yorkshire, was preaching in London. He was uncouth and vulgar in his methods, but had a strange ability to arouse the emotional piety of his congregations. Upon this occasion he had drawn a vivid picture of Christ as King, the pageantry of His coronation, the splendor of the heavenly host, and at the end he suddenly began to sing "All hail the power of Jesus' name;" the effect can hardly be imagined. In "Duffield's English Hymns" there will be found (p. 17) a very striking anecdote concerning Perronet, the author, and Charles Wesley.

E. PERRONET (1779).

All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name

(Miles Lane)

"King of Kings and Lord of Lords."

Shrubsole is said to have written this tune in the organ loft of the Cathedral of Canterbury, but it is also said that it was derived from some other source than his own brain. This is the tune to which Perronet's words are usually sung in the Methodist churches in England. Shrubsole died in Massachusetts in 1811. One authority has it that he died in England and was buried there, — a statement which is pretty well refuted; as it is made by the same authority who casts doubt upon the origin of Miles Lane, we may perhaps as well give Shrubsole the credit. He certainly died in Massachusetts, and probably wrote this tune.

12 Hymns Every Child Should Know

E. PERRONET (1779).

SHRUBSOLE.

Crown Him, ye morning stars of light,
 Who fix'd this floating ball;
 Now hail the Strength of Israel's might,
 And crown Him LORD of all.

Crown Him, ye Martyrs of your God,
Who from His altar call;
Extol the Stem-of-Jesse's Rod,
And crown Him LORD of all.

Ye seed of Israel's chosen race,
Ye ransom'd of the fall,
Hail Him Who saves you by His grace,
And crown Him LORD of all.

Hail Him, ye heirs of David's line,
Whom David LORD did call,
The GOD Incarnate, Man Divine,
And crown Him LORD of all.

Sinners, whose love can ne'er forget
The wormwood and the gall,
Go spread your trophies at His feet,
And crown Him LORD of all.

Let every tribe and every tongue
Before Him prostrate fall,
And shout in universal song
The crownèd LORD of all.

All People that on Earth

(Old Hundredth)

"Be joyful in the Lord, all ye lands."

Händel declared that Martin Luther had written this hymn, but it cannot be true. That given below is the original musical version. The one usually sung is written with notes of equal length from beginning to end. This music first had the words of the 134th Psalm set to it, but later, when it was brought to England by the Puritans after their sojourn on the continent, it was reset to a metrical arrangement of Psalm C. At one time this was known as Savoy, because it was a favorite in a so-called locality of London. The first version of which we have any knowledge was printed in a Huguenot psalter in Geneva in 1551. It contains forty-nine versions made by Marot. The author is supposed to have been William Kethe, in 1561, but the discrepancy in dates would void this supposition. It seems more likely that Sternhold wrote it, because out of a collection of twenty-five psalms added by Kethe to the old Psalter, all but one was signed "W. K.," — Kethe's initials, — while one, the Old Hundredth, bore those of Thomas Sternhold. A great number of authorities have since then accredited this hymn to Kethe on the strength of a preponderance of evidence afforded by its inclusion in many collections under his signature. The music used here, with its long and short notes, has far more character than the familiar version. With no divisions to mark the time it is an example of how vague and irregular these music scores once were. The original was written in the tenor clef.

UNKNOWN.

All peo - ple that on earth do dwell,

Sing to the LORD with cheer-ful voice;

The LORD, ye know, is GOD indeed;
Without our aid He did us make;
We are His flock, He doth us feed,
And for His sheep He doth us take.

O enter then His gates with praise,
Approach with joy His courts unto;
Praise, laud, and bless His Name always,
For it is seemly so to do.

For why? the LORD our GOD is good;
His mercy is forever sure;
His truth at all times firmly stood,
And shall from age to age endure.

TO FATHER, SON, and HOLY GHOST,
The GOD whom Heav'n and earth adore,
From men and from the Angel-host,
Be praise and glory evermore.

Before Jehovah's Awful Throne

Words by WATTS (1719).

Tune, Old Hundredth.

Before JEHOVAH's awful throne,
Ye nations bow with sacred joy;
Know that the LORD is GOD, alone;
He can create, and He destroy.

His sov'reign power without our aid,
Made us of clay and form'd us men;
And when like wand'ring sheep we stray'd
He brought us to His fold again.

We'll crowd Thy gates with thankful songs;
High as the Heav'ns our voices raise;
And earth with her ten thousand tongues
Shall fill Thy courts with sounding praise.

Wide as the world is Thy command;
Vast as eternity Thy love;
Firm as a rock Thy truth shall stand,
When rolling years shall cease to move.

Almighty Father, Hear our Cry

(Rockingham. New)

"Thou shalt shew us wonderful things in Thy righteousness, O God of our salvation: Thou that art the hope of all the ends of the earth, and of them that remain in the broad sea," or "Peace, be still!"

The Rev. Edward Henry Bickersteth was born in London in 1825, and he died the Bishop of Exeter in 1885. A book called "Congregational Church Music" first made us acquainted with the composer, Lowell Mason. Many tunes have been made of the original, but its origin is given with the "old version."

Bp. E. H. BICKERSTETH (1869).

DR. LOWELL MASON.

Al - migh - ty FA - THER, hear our cry,

As o'er the track - less deep we roam;

Be Thou our ha - ven, al - ways nigh,

On home - less wa - ters, Thou our home.

O JESUS, SAVIOUR, at Whose Voice
 The tempest sank to perfect rest,
 Bid thou the fearful heart rejoice,
 And cleanse and calm the troubled breast.

O HOLY GHOST, beneath Whose Power
 The ocean woke to life and light,
 Command Thy blessing in this hour,
 Thy fostering warmth, Thy quickening might.

Great GOD of our salvation, Thee
 We love, we worship, we adore;
 Our Refuge on Time's changeful sea,
 Our Joy on Heav'n's eternal shore.

A Mighty Fortress is our God

(Ein' Feste Burg)

The best translation of this hymn of Luther's is Carlyle's. The one given below is not that, but it has been chosen for its peculiar lack of literary finish, which has seemed to preserve to it more of the original spirit than any other translation. Though crude, it is forceful and impressive. The tune name is Worms in many hymnals. The hymn has, perhaps, the most popular history of any one known. It became the war-song of Germany, being sung by soldiers as they went into battle and into camp, and also was sung in the streets as a street song. When Melancthon and his friends were exiled after Luther's death they heard a little girl sing "Ein' Feste Burg" in the streets of Weimar. Melancthon said, "Sing on, my child; thou little knowest how thy song cheers our hearts." In 1870, when the Franco-Prussian war was on, this great German hymn again aroused the German nation, and it became as popular in the streets as our concert-hall songs are here. The singing of this hymn was made the ground for many imprisonments. One group of men arrested for singing it finally escaped and went to England, where they fell in with the great Wesley, and their influence upon him served to bring about the extraordinary Methodist revival. Mendelssohn used this melody in his Reformation symphony; Meyerbeer introduced it into Les Huguenots; but Wagner made the most of it in the Kaisermarsch, which he composed in celebration of the triumphant return to Berlin of the soldiers, after the war with France. Luther is said to have composed the music from a suggestion furnished by the song of a "wayfaring" man. It was published first in 1535, but it was not called "Luther's Hymn" till the Rev. Wm. Collyer set words to it. The last time of importance that the hymn was sung was in 1899, at Manchester, England, by Miss Esther Palliser.

 All watching to devour us,
 We tremble not, we fear no ill,
 They cannot overpower us.
 This world's prince may still Scowl fierce as he will,
 He can harm us none,
 He's judged, the deed is done,
 One little word o'erthrows him.

The Word they still shall let remain,
 And not a thank have for it,
 He's by our side upon the plain,
 With His good gifts and Spirit.

Take they then our life,

When their worst is done
They yet have nothing won,
The Kingdom ours remaineth.

Arise, my Soul, Arise

(Lenox)

This hymn has extensive anecdotal history, but the most picturesque story recorded is that of its connection with a Patagonian missionary expedition which ended disastrously for all concerned. The company was wiped out by violence and disease, and the captain of the ship upon which the company had embarked wrote in his diary, Sept. 6, 1851: "I neither hunger nor thirst, though five days without food! Marvellous loving kindness to me, a sinner!" This Captain Gardiner and John

Babcock were almost the only ones left of the expedition. Babcock died first, and he asked the survivors to sing this hymn. That expedition was the direct means of establishing the first Terre del Fuegan mission.

And sprinkles now the Throne of Grace.

My God is reconciled,
His pardoning voice I hear;
He owns me for his child;
I can no longer fear;
With confidence I now draw nigh,
And "FATHER, ABBA, FATHER!" cry.

Extol the LAMB of GOD,
The all-atoning LAMB;
Redemption in His Blood
Throughout the world proclaim:
The year of jubilee has come!
Return, ye ransomed sinners, home.

The gospel trumpet hear
The news of heavenly grace;
And, saved from earth, appear
Before your SAVIOUR's face;
The year of jubilee has come!
Return, ye ransomed sinners, home.

Asleep in Jesus

(Rest)

The inspiration of the words for this hymn was found in the inscription on a tombstone, "Sleeping in Jesus," at Pennycross, Devonshire. Since the making of the hymn, the inscription has become a favorite one. Bradbury has written another hymn, "Return, O Wanderer, Return," which has such a general similarity to this one that these words are frequently sung to the other tune. The musical style is not only similar, but the melodies suggest each other.

MARGARET MACKAY (1832).

W. B. BRADBURY.

A - sleep in JE - SUS! bless - ed sleep!

Asleep in JESUS! Oh, how sweet
To be for such a slumber meet!
With holy confidence to sing
That death hath lost its venom'd sting!

Asleep in JESUS! peaceful rest!
Whose waking is supremely blest;
No fear — no woe, shall dim the hour
That manifests the SAVIOUR's power.

Asleep in JESUS! oh, for me
May such a blissful refuge be:
Securely shall my ashes lie,
And wait the summons from on high.

(Cherith)

"Like as the hart desireth the water-brooks, so longeth my soul after Thee, O God."

A paraphrase of this is given in Sternhold and Hopkins, and the first verse is as follows:

"Like as the hart doth pant and bray."

This was printed in 1666. The original tune to which the words were set was St. Anne's.

REV. HENRY FRANCIS LYTE.

SPOHR.

As pants* the hart for cool - ing streams,

* In Hebrew the word "panteth" implies a cry peculiar to the deer when it is thirsty. The word is used but twice in the Bible. "Panteth" literally "Brayeth."

So longs my soul, O God, for Thee,

And Thy re - fresh - ing grace.

For Thee, my God, the living God,
My thirsty soul doth pine ;
Oh, when shall I behold Thy face,
Thou Majesty Divine?

Why restless, why cast down, my soul?
Hope still, and thou shalt sing
The praise of Him Who is the God,
Thy health's eternal Spring.

To FATHER, SON, and HOLY GHOST,
The God Whom we adore,
Be glory, as it was, is now,
And shall be evermore.

As Pants the Wearied Hart for Cooling Springs

(Berlin)

"As the hart panteth after the water-brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God."

This setting of the words of Bishop Lowth is used because it is one of the few exceptions where the music by a great composer fits a congregational hymn. Mendelssohn, when asked by a compiler of hymns to write a tune suitable for certain words, and who added that it must be in long metre, sent the following reply :

"I was sorry I could not write exactly what you desired me to do, but I do not know what a 'long-metre psalm-tune' means, and there is nobody . . . to whom I could apply for an explanation. Excuse me, therefore, if you receive something else than what you wished."

This was doubtless the chief reason why so few of the great German composers wrote much for hymn-books.

Bp. LOWTH.

MENDELSSOHN.

As pants the wea-ried hart for cool-ing springs,

That sinks ex-haust-ed in the sum-mer's chase,

So pants my soul for Thee, great King of kings,

So thirsts to reach Thy sa-cred dwell-ing place.

LORD, Thy sure mercies ever in my sight,
 My heart shall gladden through the tedious day;
 And 'midst the dark and gloomy shades of night,
 To Thee, my GOD, I'll tune the grateful lay.

Why faint, my soul? why doubt JEHOVAH's aid?
 Thy GOD the GOD of mercy still shall prove;
 Within His courts thy thanks shall yet be paid:
 Unquestioned be His faithfulness and love.

SCHUBERT.

The musical score for 'Ave Maria' by Schubert is presented in four staves. The key signature is one flat (B-flat) and the time signature is 4/4. The lyrics are written in German and English below the notes.

Ave Maria, mother dear!

The heath on which we now lie sleeping,

A down bed seems, if thou art near,

To guard us in thy holy keeping.

When thy soft smile creation cheereth,

To rest is lulled the stormy gale;
The moon more silvery white appeareth;
The dew shines brighter o'er the vale.

Ave Maria!

Ave Maria! hear our prayer!
If still by thy protection blest
No spirits of earth or air
Shall dare, shall dare to break our peaceful rest.
Thy child, with care and sorrow laden,
In lowly supplication bows;
Be near, we pray thee, Holy Maiden,
O Virgin Mother, hear our vows!

Ave Maria.

Awake, my Soul, and with the Sun

(Morning).

"I myself will awake right early."

The "Thumb Bible" was a little Bible, or a part of one, which Jeremy Taylor made for the son of Princess Anne. The child died in 1700. In that volume were included the two famous hymns of Bishop Ken: Morning and Evening. The Bishop wrote these for the occasions indicated by their titles, and sung them to his own accompaniment on the lute. He was with Charles II. when he died, and under James II. was imprisoned in the Tower of London. He requested when he died to be buried "under the east window of the chancel, just at sunrise," in Frome. This was done, and his morning hymn was sung as he was placed in the grave.

Bishop KEN (1695).

F. H. BARTHOLEMON.

A - wake, my soul, and with the sun,
Thy dai - ly stage of du - ty run;
Shake off dull sloth, and ear - ly rise
To pay thy morn - ing sac - ri - fice.

Redeem thy misspent time that's past,
And live this day as if thy last;
Improve thy talent with due care;
For the great Day thyself prepare.

Let all thy converse be sincere,
Thy conscience as the noonday clear;
Think how all-seeing GOD thy ways
And all thy secret thoughts surveys.

Wake, and lift up thyself, my heart,
And with the angels bear thy part,
Who all night long unwearied sing
High praise to the Eternal King.

Praise GOD from whom all blessings flow,
Praise Him, all creatures here below,
Praise Him above, ye Heav'nly Host,
Praise FATHER, SON, and HOLY GHOST.

Awake, my Soul, Stretch Every Nerve

(Christmas)

Händel, in writing this music, made an exception to the rule that hymn-tunes were not generally written by great composers. Händel and the Wesleys were contemporaneous, and each was famous in his own way. Charles Wesley frequented the house of Rich, the proprietor of Covent Garden, where Händel's oratorios were being given, and Händel also frequented Rich's house. In all probability it was thus that the two famous men met. In a letter dated Sept. 14, 1826, Samuel Wesley, son of the hymn-writer, said to his wife:

"I have already found six fine hymn-tunes of Händel's own manufacture, and what is uncommonly fortunate, they are all set to my father's own words, so that my dear father's poetry must highly have delighted Händel."

There could not have been six, because Händel wrote only three, so far as we know.

PHILIP DODDRIDGE (1755).

HÄNDEL.

A - wake, my soul, stretch ev - 'ry nerve,

And press with vig - or on: A

A cloud of witnesses around
 Hold thee in full survey;
 Forget the steps already trod,
 And onward urge thy way.

'T is God's all-animating voice
 That calls thee from on high;
 'T is His own hand presents the prize
 To thine uplifted eye.

Then wake, my soul, stretch every nerve,
 And press with vigor on;
 A heav'nly race demands thy zeal
 And an immortal crown.

Blest be the Tie that Binds

(Dennis)

Perhaps the occasion for writing this hymn was less elegant than that of many others, but it is more touching than most. Dr. Fawcett was moving from the house in which he had long lived, to go to London, where a better living had been offered him. While his books and furniture were standing packed upon the wagons his wife began to weep.

She said: "Oh, John, I cannot bear this." "Neither can I," said John, "and we will not go." So that ended his fine London living. He went back into his old house, sat down and wrote this hymn — at least that is what he is said to have done. It is more likely that he had his furniture unloaded first and set to rights, and was more or less recovered from the excitement of the moment before he began to write.

Rev. JOHN FAWCETT (1772).

HANS GEORG NAGELI.

Blest be the tie that binds Our hearts in JE - sus' love; The fel - low - ship of Chris - tian minds Is like to that a - bove.

Before our FATHER'S throne
 We pour united prayers;
 Our fears, our hopes, our aims are one;
 Our comforts and our cares.

We share our mutual woes,
 Our mutual burdens bear;
 And often for each other flows
 The sympathizing tear.

When we at death must part,
 Not like the world's our pain;

But one in CHRIST, and one in heart,
We part to meet again.

From sorrow, toil, and pain,
And sin we shall be free;
And perfect love and friendship reign
Throughout eternity.

First the blessèd Virgin-mother,
Reunited to her SON,
Leads the host of ransom'd people,
Who unfading crowns have won;
John the herald, CHRIST's fore-runner,
More than Prophet, heads his throng,
Seer and Patriarch responsive
Unto Psalmist in their song.

Lo, the Twelve majestic Princes,
In the court of JESUS sit,
Calmly watching, while the conflict
Rages far beneath their feet:
Lo, the Martyrs, robed in crimson,
Sign of life-blood freely spent,
Finding life, because they lost it,
Dwell in undisturb'd content.

All the saintly host who witness'd
Good confessions for His sake —
Priest and Deacon, world-renouncing,
Of their Master's joy partake;

Virgins to the LAMB devoted,
 Following with steadfast love,
 Bring their lilies and their roses
 To the Marriage Feast above.

All, their happy lot fulfilling,
 GOD Omnipotent proclaim;
 Holy, Holy, Holy, crying,
 Glory to His holy name!
 So may GOD in mercy grant us
 Here to serve in holiness,
 Till He call us to the portion
 Which His Saints in light possess.

JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER.

WM. V. WALLACE.

We may not climb the heaven-ly steeps To

But warm, sweet, tender, even yet
A present help is He;
And faith has still its Olivet,
And love its Galilee.

The healing of the seamless dress
Is by our beds of pain;
We touch Him in life's throng and press,
And we are whole again.

Through Him the first fond prayers are said
Our lips of childhood frame;
The last low whispers of our dead
Are burdened with His name.

O Lord and Master of us all,
Whate'er our name or sign,
We own Thy sway, we hear Thy call,
We test our lives by Thine.

By Cool Siloam's Shady Rill

One of our early wars occasioned the birth of this hymn. Its author, Bishop Heber, was to the Church of England what Watts was to the non-conformist bodies. Such hymns as "Jesus, Lover of my Soul," could find no acceptance with him; they were too materialistic. In the preface to his hymn-book he says, "No fulsome or indecorous language has been knowingly adopted, no erotic address to Him whom no unclean lips can approach, no allegory, ill-understood and worse applied." His hymns were, one and all, written up to this standard. In the Methodist church he found Wesley to be of his own way of thinking, in regard to such hymns as "Jesus, Lover of my Soul." Wesley would not include it in his collection without protest.

Bp. R. HEBER (1812).

I. B. WOODBURY.

By cool Si - lo - am's sha - dy rill, How fair the li - ly grows ! How sweet the breath, be - neath the hill, Of Shar - on's dew - y rose !

Lo ! such the child whose early feet
The paths of peace have trod ;
Whose secret heart, with influence sweet,
Is upward drawn to God.

By cool Siloam's shady rill
The lily must decay ;
The rose that blooms beneath the hill
Must shortly fade away.

And soon, too soon, the wint'ry hour
Of man's maturer age
May shake the soul with sorrow's power
And stormy passion's rage.

O thou, whose infant feet were found
 Within thy FATHER'S shrine,
 Whose years, with changeless virtues crowned,
 Were all alike divine!

Dependent on Thy bounteous breath,
 We seek Thy grace alone
 In childhood, manhood, age, and death,
 To keep us still Thine own.

Children of the Heavenly King

(Pleyel)

"The ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs."

Mr. Cennick was known as the man who earned for the Methodists of his generation the name of "swaddlers." A priest heard him speak of a child in "swaddling clothes," and forthwith gave to his denomination the name which stuck for some time, especially in Ireland. Cennick died before he was forty, having been a disciple of both Wesley and Whitefield.

We are travelling home to GOD
In the way the fathers trod;
They are happy now, and we Soon their happiness shall see.

Lift your eyes, ye sons of light,
Zion's city is in sight;
There our endless home shall be;
There our LORD we soon shall see.

Fear not, brethren, joyful stand
On the borders of your land;
JESUS CHRIST, your FATHER'S SON,
Bids you undismay'd go on.

Fear not, brethren, joyful stand
Gladly leaving all below;
Only Thou our Leader be,
And we still will follow Thee.

Christ, the Lord, is Risen To-Day

(Mozart)

Wesley undoubtedly got his suggestion for this hymn from one by Michael Weisse, written in 1531, for the first hymn-book of the Bohemian Brethren. It was then an Easter hymn, and it is possible that Weisse translated it from the Latin. Charles Wesley wrote 1609 hymns on the Old Testament, and 3491 on the New.

Lo, he sets in blood no more.

Vain the stone, the watch, the seal;
CHRIST hath burst the gates of hell!

Death in vain forbids His rise;
CHRIST hath opened Paradise!

Lives again our glorious KING;
"Where, O death, is now thy sting?"
Once He died our souls to save;
"Where thy victory, boasting grave?"

Hail, the LORD of earth and heaven!
Praise to Thee by both be given!
Thee we greet triumphant now;
Hail! the RESURRECTION, THOU!

"As many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

The author of this hymn was a very brilliant man who did his finest work after he became insane. His insanity consisted in his belief that he could not think. Dr. Allibone has said of him, "If he was crazy, he was at least equal to more than two infidels." His extraordinary malady attacked him after he had killed a highwayman who had set upon him and his friend. Dr. Browne had meant only to disarm the man, but his grip was so herculean that before he was aware the robber was choked to death.

Dr. S. BROWNE (1720).

Nor let us from His pastures stray;
Lead us to holiness, the road
That we must take to dwell with God.

Lead us to Heav'n, that we may share
Fulness of joy forever there;
Lead us to GOD, our final rest,
To be with Him forever blest.

Come, Thou Fount of every Blessing

(Nettleton)

The author of this hymn was sent to London by his mother to become a barber and a hair-dresser, but instead he became a preacher and a hymn-writer. In the latter part of his life, when he had gained a reputation for frivolity and had occasioned his sedate friends some concern, he was riding in a stage-coach. A woman opposite him who had been reading this hymn insisted upon having his opinion of it, not knowing that he was its author. He avoided the matter as best he could, but finally, when she insisted and expressed much admiration for the hymn, he cried, "Madame, I am the poor, unhappy man who composed that hymn many years ago, and I would give a thousand worlds, if I had them, to enjoy the feelings I had then." There is something exceedingly interesting in the construction of this hymn, literary and otherwise. A marked difference from others is very evident. It illustrates the very practical though emotional character of the Methodist revivals. There is no more grandeur of movement in the music than in the verse. It is the merest doggerel, but at the same time its sincerity commands respect. The music is cheaply rhythmic, but it inspires emotion, and it is highly characteristic of the period.

Come, ye Disconsolate

(Consolator)

"Come unto me and I will give you rest."

It is surprising to many that Thomas Moore should have written a hymn, but as a matter of fact, that joyous Irishman wrote thirty-two; possibly an overflow of genius rather than of piety.

THOMAS MOORE (1816).

S. WEBBE.

Come, ye dis-consolate, where'er ye languish,

Come to the mer-cy seat, fer-vent-ly kneel;

Here bring your wounded hearts, here tell your an-guish;

Joy of the desolate, light of the straying,

Hope of the penitent, fadeless and pure,

Here speaks the Comforter, tenderly saying,

"Earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot cure."

Here see the Bread of life; see waters flowing

Forth from the throne of God, pure from above;

Come to the feast of love; come, ever knowing

Earth has no sorrow but Heaven can remove.

Creator, Spirit! by Whose Aid

Tr. by JOHN DRYDEN.

O Source of uncreated light,
The Father's promised Paraclete!
Thrice holy Fount, thrice holy Fire,
Our hearts with heavenly love inspire:
Come, and thy sacred unction bring,
To sanctify us while we sing.

Plenteous of grace, descend from high,
Rich in thy sevenfold energy!
Thou Strength of His almighty hand,
Whose power does heaven and earth command,
Refine and purge our earthly parts,
But Oh! inflame and fire our hearts!

Day of Wrath! O Day of Mourning!

(Dies Irae)

"He cometh to judge the earth."

Ancient Plain Song.

Day of wrath! O day of mourn - ing!

See ful - fill'd the pro - phets' warn - ing!

Heav'n and earth in ash - es burn - ing!

Oh, what fear man's bo - som rend - eth

When from Heav'n the Judge de - scend - eth,

On Whose sen - tence all de - pend - - eth!

Wondrous sound the trumpet flingeth,
Through earth's sepulchres it ringeth,
All before the Throne it bringeth.
Death is struck, and nature quaking,
All creation is awaking,
To its Judge an answer making.

Lo! the Book exactly worded,
Wherein all hath been recorded;
Thence shall judgment be awarded.
When the Judge His seat attaineth,
And each hidden deed arraigneth,
Nothing unavenged remaineth.

What shall I, frail man, be pleading,
Who for me be interceding,
When the just are mercy needing?
King of Majesty tremendous,
Who dost free salvation send us,
Fount of pity, then befriend us!

Think, good JESU, my salvation
Caused Thy wondrous Incarnation;
Leave me not to reprobation.
Faint and weary Thou hast sought me,
On the Cross of suffering bought me;
Shall such grace be vainly brought me?

Righteous Judge! for sin's pollution
Grant Thy gift of absolution,
Ere that day of retribution.

Guilty, now I pour my moaning,
 All my shame with anguish owning;
 Spare, O God, Thy suppliant groaning.

Thou the sinful woman savedst;
 Thou the dying thief forgavest;
 And to me a hope vouchsafest.
 Worthless are my prayers and sighing;
 Yet, good LORD, in grace complying,
 Rescue me from fires undying.

And if our breth - ren were not kind,

This earth were but a wea - ry place.

We lean on others as we walk
Life's twilight path, with pitfalls strewn;
And 't were an idle boast to talk
Of treading that dim path alone.

Amid the snares misfortune lays
Unseen beneath the steps of all,
Blest is the love that seeks to raise,
And stay and strengthen those who fall;

Till, taught by Him who for our sake
Bore every form of life's distress,
With every passing year we make
The sum of human sorrow less.

Depth of Mercy, can there be

While "Hymns Ancient and Modern," was being compiled, the publishers advertised for suggestions, and the tune most desired by those who responded to that advertisement was this air of Von Weber's which is made from the opening chorus of Oberon. It is generally known as Weber.

I have long withstood His grace;
 Long provoked Him to His face;
 Would not harken to His calls;
 Grieved Him by a thousand falls.

Kindled His relentings are;
Me He now delights to spare;
Cries, "How shall I give thee up?"
Lest the lifted thunder drop.

There for me the SAVIOUR stands;
Shows His wounds and spreads His hands!
God is love! I know, I feel:
JESUS weeps and loves me still.

Far be Sorrow, Tears, and Sighing

(Victory)

"Thanks be to God Who giveth us the victory."

This tune is taken from the setting of the "Magnificat" of Palestrina, a composer called after the place of his birth. He was one of the greatest composers of Catholic Church music the world has ever seen. The first appearance of Victory with English words, was in 1852, although it was written in the sixteenth century. "Palestrina" was born in 1526.

GIOVANNI PERLUIGI (Palestrina).

Far be sor - row, tears, and sigh - ing!

Waves are calm - ing, storms are dy - ing;

Is - rael's cap - tive hosts are free;

Life by death slew death and saved us,

In His Blood the LAMB hath lav'd us,

Cloth - ing us with vic - to - ry.

JESUS CHRIST from death hath risen,
 Lo! His Godhead bursts the prison
 While His Manhood passes free,
 Vanquishing our misery.
 Rise we free from condemnation;
 Through our God's humiliation,
 Ours is now the victory.

Vain the foe's despair and madness!
 See the dayspring of our gladness!
 Slaves no more of Satan, we;
 Children by the SON set free;
 Rise, for Life with Death hath striven,
 All the snares of hell are riven,
 Rise and claim the victory.

Thou hast no shore, fair ocean;
Thou hast no time, bright day:
Dear fountain of refreshment
To pilgrims far away:
Upon the Rock of Ages
They raise thy holy tower;
Thine is the victor's laurel,
And thine the golden dower.

And now we fight the battle,
But then shall wear the crown
Of full and everlasting
And passionless renown:
But He whom now we trust in Shall then be seen and known;
And they that know and see Him
Shall have Him for their own.

The morning shall awaken,
The shadows shall decay,
And each true-hearted servant
Shall shine as doth the day:
There GOD, our KING and portion,
In fulness of his grace,
Shall we behold forever,
And worship face to face.

O sweet and blessèd country,
 The home of GOD's elect!
 O sweet and blessèd country
 That eager hearts expect!
 JESUS, in mercy bring us
 To that dear land of rest;
 Who art, with GOD the FATHER,
 And SPIRIT, ever blest.

From Greenland's Icy Mountains

(Missionary Hymn)

"Come over — and help us."

Heber did for the Church of England what Watts and Wesley had done in the way of hymn-writing for their respective sects. This missionary hymn was almost an impromptu work, since Heber was asked on a Saturday to write something suitable for the next day, and before Sunday had dawned he had written the following. He was unable to complete it at the time for lack of inspiration, and the line "Waft, waft, ye winds, the story" was written almost immediately after the hymn was first sung. He made only a single change in it afterwards, and that was the substitution of the word "heathen" for "savages." The hymn was put in type on the Saturday night that it was written. Heber was the tenderest of men, and ever accepted his calamities as blessings.

Bp. R. HEBER (1819).

What though the spicy breezes
 Blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle,
 Though every prospect pleases
 And only man is vile:
 In vain with lavish kindness
 The gifts of God are strown,
 The heathen in his blindness
 Bows down to wood and stone.

Can we whose souls are lighted
 With wisdom from on high,
 Can we to men benighted
 The lamp of life deny?
 Salvation! Oh, salvation!
 The joyful sound proclaim,
 Till each remotest nation
 Has learned MESSIAH's name.

Waft, waft, ye winds, His story,
 And you, ye waters, roll,
 Till like a sea of glory
 It spreads from pole to pole;
 Till o'er our ransom'd nature
 The LAMB for sinners slain,
 Redeemer, King, Creator,
 In bliss returns to reign.

Gentle Jesus, Meek and Mild

Charles Wesley jotted down most of his hymns by a system of short-hand taught him by his friend Byrom — the writer of the following famous lines:

"God bless the King — I mean the Faith's defender;
 God bless — no harm in blessing — the Pretender;
 But who the Pretender is, or who the King —
 God bless us all — that 's quite another thing!"

This brilliantly equivocal piece of rhyming at a time when the English nation was up in arms over their internal troubles, became so famous that Wesley's friend seems to have been diverted from hymn-writing. Wesley's hymn-writing did not really begin till after his marriage, at which time he was forty or more. These tender verses were for the most part inspired by his domestic happiness.

CHAS. WESLEY (1763).

Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken

(Austria)

"Glorious things are spoken of thee, O thou city of God."

Almost every hymn that this author wrote was inspired by the occasion. Most of his verse is of a pastoral order, gentle and soothing, written to meet the direct needs of his people. Indeed, many of the hymns were written for some special person in his congregation. Cowper, the poet, was a member, and we read: "If 'Sir Cowper' had a bad fit, or the vicar-age maid, Molly, was perplexed and tempted on the point of election, Newton had a sermon or hymn to meet their conditions."

Rev. JOHN NEWTON (1779).

Ever flows their thirst to assuage;
Grace, which like the LORD, the Giver,
Never fails from age to age?

Round each habitation hov'ring,
See the cloud and fire appear,
For a glory and a cov'ring —
Showing that the LORD is near.

 Daily on the manna feeding
 Which He gives them when they pray.

SAVIOUR, since of Zion's city
 I, through grace, a member am,
 Let the world deride or pity,
 I will glory in Thy Name.
 Fading is the world's best pleasure,
 All its boasted pomp and show;
 Solid joys and lasting treasure
 None but Zion's children know.

God Moves in a Mysterious Way

(London. New)

"What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter."

Children are likely to remember Cowper by the ballad of "John Gilpin." The poet's and hymn-writer's life was a peculiarly melancholy one, and its distractions began with the death of his mother, when he was six years old. Later he was sent to a school where the cruel treatment he endured affected his mind. He was mentally broken at the age of seven by the hazing in fashion with the boys of English schools. This sad writer of a merry ballad spent most of his life with clergymen as his closest friends. He wrote his hymns as well as his poems in their society. He also sewed, looked after his pet hares, and worked in the garden.

Ye fearful * saints, fresh courage take;
The clouds ye so much dread
Are big with mercy, and shall break
In blessings on your head.

Judge not the LORD by feeble sense,
But trust Him for His grace;
Behind a frowning providence
He hides a smiling face.

Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan His work in vain;
God is His own interpreter,
And He will make it plain.

* The word "fearful" is thus used in its most proper sense, and does not imply that the saints were to be feared.

Guide me, O Thou Great Jehovah

(Pillar)

"This God is our God forever and ever; and He shall be our guide unto death."

William Williams of Pantycelyn was to Wales what Watts was to England, as a hymn-writer. His best known lines are those below and "O'er those gloomy hills of darkness." He was a preacher without intending it. He was studying medicine when he halted at the yard of a parish church where the preacher was mounted on a tombstone exhorting his congregation, and, while standing there, Williams believed himself called to the ministry. He was first Church of England, but afterward joined Whitefield in his work.

Hark! the Herald Angels Sing

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

This is the only Wesleyan hymn that has been included in the Church of England Hymnal. The original first line was, "Hark! how all the welkin rings." The accident or well-concealed intent on the part of somebody by which this characteristic Methodist hymn got into the Church of England Hymnal has caused it to be sung by thousands, and the ritualists cannot oust it despite many attempts.

Born that man no more may die,
Born to raise the sons of earth,
Born to give them second birth,

Hold the Fort *

"That which ye have hold fast till I come."

The excitement which this aroused for several years when sung congregationally, and especially under the direction of its author and composer, is beyond description. There is in it absolutely nothing devotional from the first word to the last, and the music is absurd, but the combination of rhythm and high-colored text aroused thousands to the pitch of hysteria. The words grew out of a signal wig-wagged by Sherman during the Civil War. "Hold the fort; I am coming." Mr. Bliss heard of this at a Sunday-school meeting, and he was convinced that there was a revival spirit in the idea. When holding a meeting elsewhere the next day, he went to the blackboard, wrote the words, and then sang them to the familiar tune for the first time. Thus the song was born.

Holy, Holy, Holy! Lord God Almighty

(Nicea)

"They rest not day and night, saying, Holy, Holy, Holy! Lord God Almighty, Which was, and is, and is to come."

The Rev. Dr. Dykes' method of writing hymn-tunes was to play them to the members of his family on the Sunday night following their composition. If any criticism arose he changed the tunes accordingly. Nicea is one of his most widely known tunes. Their names were chosen by him for their especial application to whatever had suggested the hymn.

Holy, Holy, Holy! though the darkness hide
 Thee,
 Though the eye of sinful man Thy glory may not see,
 Only Thou art Holy, there is none beside Thee,
 Perfect in power, in love, and purity.

Holy, Holy, Holy! LORD GOD ALMIGHTY!
 All Thy works shall praise Thy Name in earth,
 and sky, and sea:
 Holy, Holy, Holy! Merciful and Mighty!
 GOD in THREE PERSONS, blessèd TRINITY!

How Firm a Foundation, ye Saints of the Lord

(Portuguese Hymn)

There seems to be no unanimity of opinion concerning the authorship of this hymn. The names mentioned in connection with it are George Keith, an English publisher, son-in-law of Dr. Gill, Kirkham, and the Rev. Mr. Keen, who is said to have written the hymn in the same year that Keith is said to have written it (1785). The hymn first appeared in "Ripon's Selection" in 1787.

You who un - to JE - SUS for ref - uge have fled?

Fear not, I am with thee ; oh, be not dismayed !
 I, I am thy GOD and will still give thee aid ;
 I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand

|| : Upheld by My righteous, omnipotent Hand. : ||

When through the deep waters I call thee to go,

The rivers of woe shall not thee overflow ;
 For I will be with thee, thy troubles to bless,

|| : And sanctify to thee thy deepest distress. : ||

When through fiery trials thy pathway shall lie,

My grace all sufficient shall be thy supply ;
 The flame shall not hurt thee ; I only design

|| : Thy dross to consume, and thy gold to refine. : ||

The soul that to JESUS hath fled for repose,
 I will not, I will not desert to His foes ;
 That soul, though all hell shall endeavor to shake,

|| : I'll never, no, never, no, never forsake. : ||

How Sweet and Awful is the Place

(Dundee)

"Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in."

A young woman, Susanna Harrison, who was a domestic servant from the age of sixteen, turned hymn-writer, and a collection of her verse was published in New York in 1847. This hymn of Watts' was her favorite. She suffered greatly before her death, and just before the end she said: "I have not sung for some time. Sing with me, it will not hurt me. Sing Dr. Watts' hymn, 'How sweet and awful is the place.'" She continued after this to sing the entire night, and died singing ecstatically. Dundee is referred to in Burns' "Cottar's Saturday Night." The name once local to Scotland, in time became accepted all over the country. It was known in the beginning as Eaton, and in 1591 as Windsor.

When all our hearts and all our songs

Join to admire the feast,

Each of us cries with thankful tongue, —

"LORD, why was I a guest?"

"Why was I made to hear Thy voice,
And enter while there's room,
When thousands make a wretched choice,
And rather starve than come?"

'T was the same love that spread the feast
That sweetly drew us in;
Else we had still refused to taste,
And perished in our sin.

Pity the nations, O our God!
Constrain the earth to come;
Send Thy victorious word abroad,
And bring the strangers home.

How Sweet the Name of Jesus Sounds

(St. Peter)

"Unto you, therefore, which believe, He is precious."

Newton doubtless evolved this hymn from the great Latin one of St. Bernard of Clairvaux, which is called in the Olney hymns, "The Name of Jesus."

Dear Name! the rock on which I build,
My shield and hiding-place,
My never-failing treasury fill'd
With boundless stores of grace.

JESUS! my Shepherd, Husband, Friend,
My Prophet, Priest, and King,
My LORD, my Life, my Way, my End,
Accept the praise I bring.

Weak is the effort of my heart,
And cold my warmest thought:
But when I see Thee as Thou art,
I'll praise Thee as I ought.

Till then I would Thy love proclaim
With every fleeting breath;
And may the music of Thy Name
Refresh my soul in death.

Dr. Bonar was one of the few hymn-writers of the nineteenth century. His grandfather was also a hymn-writer. Dr. H. Bonar's work is chiefly characterized by its personal note. His use of the pronouns of the first person is notable, and it has made his hymns specially popular.

I was a Wandering Sheep

(Lebanon)

"When he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders rejoicing."

Dr. H. BONAR.

J. ZUNDEL.

The Shepherd sought His sheep,
The FATHER sought His child,
They follow'd me o'er vale and hill,
O'er deserts waste and wild;

They found me nigh to death,
Famish'd, and faint, and lone;
They bound me with the bands of love,
They saved the wandering one.

They spoke in tender love,
They raised my drooping head,
They gently closed my bleeding wounds,
My fainting soul they fed;
They wash'd my filth away,
They made me clean and fair;
They brought me to my home in peace,
The long-sought wanderer.

JESUS my Shepherd is,
'T was He that loved my soul,
'T was He that wash'd me in His Blood,
'T was He that made me whole;
'T was He that sought the lost,
That found the wandering sheep;
'T was He that brought me to the fold,
'T is He that still doth keep.

I was a wandering sheep,
I would not be controll'd;
But now I love my Shepherd's voice,
I love, I love the fold.

I was a wayward child,
 I once preferr'd to roam;
 But now I love my FATHER'S voice,
 I love, I love His home.

Jerusalem, my Happy Home

"When shall I come to appear before the presence of God?"

There is great uncertainty surrounding the authorship of this hymn.
 Sometimes it is attributed to Boden.

Words VIII century. Arr. by JAS. MONTGOMERY (1802).

And pear - ly gates be - hold?

Apostles, Martyrs, Prophets, there
 Around my Saviour stand;
 And all I love in CHRIST below

Jerusalem, my happy home,
 When shall I come to thee?
 When shall my labors have an end?
 Thy joys when shall I see?

Jerusalem, my happy home!
 My soul still pants for thee;
 Then shall my labors have an end,
 When I thy joys shall see.

O CHRIST, do Thou my soul prepare
 For that bright home of love;
 That I may see Thee and adore,
 With all Thy Saints above.

Jerusalem, the Golden

(Ewing)

"And the city was pure gold."

This is a paraphrase of the Bernard of Cluny hymn, which had a cento of three thousand lines, of which four hundred and forty-two were made into an English poem. Dr. Neale, who made a paraphrase of this hymn, declared that no less than fourteen new hymnals included more or less of the stanzas. It is the seventh in rank of the English favorites.

They stand, those halls of Zion,
All jubilant with song,
And bright with many an Angel,
And all the Martyr throng;
The Prince is ever in them,
The daylight is serene;
The pastures of the blessèd
Are decked in glorious sheen.

There is the throne of David;
And there, from care released,
The shout of them that triumph,
The song of them that feast;
And they, who with their Leader
Have conquer'd in the fight,
Forever and forever
Are clad in robes of white.

O sweet and blessèd country,
The home of GOD's elect!
O sweet and blessèd country
That eager hearts expect!
JESU, in mercy bring us
To that dear land of rest;
Who art, with GOD the FATHER
And SPIRIT, ever blest.

Jesus, Lover of my Soul

(Martyn)

"A man shall be as an hiding-place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest."

This is the second of the hymns favored by tramps, and it is also one which John Wesley protested against including in his hymn-book for obvious reasons. Its character is painfully materialistic for a hymn sacred to an ideal religion. It is called a "hymn for the distressed and for the sinner." Christopher Wordsworth (Bishop of Lincoln, and nephew of Wordsworth the poet) thought it "inexpressibly shocking that 'Jesus, Lover of my Soul' should be sung in Westminster Abbey" because of the "large, mixed congregation in a dissolute part of a populous and irreligious city." At that time the harassed Doctor was Canon of Westminster.

Plenteous grace with Thee is found,
 Grace to cleanse from every sin;
 Let the healing streams abound;
 Make and keep me pure within;
 Thou of Life the Fountain art;
 Freely let me take of Thee;
 Spring Thou up within my heart,
 Rise to all eternity.

Jesus Christ is Risen To-day

(Anastasis)

"The Lord is risen indeed."

The first appearance of this great hymn, with all its swelling Alleluias, was in a little volume called "Lyra Davidica," which may be found in the British Museum and probably nowhere else. No one knows who wrote the words, but as Tate and Brady's book included them and gave them prominence, the authorship is put down to Tate and Brady. The compiler of the "Lyra Davidica" wrote as its excuse that "There is a desire for a little freer air than the grand movement of the psalm-tunes." Later, five guineas were offered by what was known as the "Cheadle Association" for a new musical setting to the hymn, which should be of a "more strictly ecclesiastical character," and the prize was won by W. H. Monk, but his tune never replaced the old one.

Jesus, we Look to Thee

(Boylston)

This hymn was originally called At Meeting of Friends, tune name, of course. It was taken from Wesley's hymns and sacred poems in 1749. The composer first became known in 1853, and the tunes Missionary, Boylston, and Harlan made him famous.

Just as I am, Without one Plea

(Woodworth)

"Him that cometh to Me, I will in no wise cast out."

This was first published in the "Invalid's Hymn-book," having been written by the author upon her conversion. Her brother, who was a preacher, declared that all his work had not accomplished so much good as his sister's one hymn. There is a French version of this hymn, also a Latin one, which seems to prove that it possesses some unusual quality. At eighty years of age the author was still writing.

W. B. BRADBURY.

Just as I am, with - out one plea,
But that Thy Blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bid'st me come to Thee,
O LAMB of GOD, I come, I come.

Just as I am, though toss'd about
With many a conflict, many a doubt,
Fightings and fears within, without,
O LAMB of GOD, I come.

Just as I am, poor, wretched, blind;
Sight, riches, healing of the mind,
Yea, all I need, in Thee to find,
O LAMB of GOD, I come.

Just as I am, Thou wilt receive,
Wilt welcome, pardon, cleanse, relieve;
Because Thy promise I believe,
O LAMB of GOD, I come.

Just as I am, Thy love unknown
Has broken every barrier down;
Now to be Thine, yea, Thine alone,
O LAMB of GOD, I come.

Just as I am, of that free love
The breadth, length, depth, and height to prove,
Here for a season, then above,
O LAMB of GOD, I come.

Lead, Kindly Light, Amid the Encircling Gloom

(Lux Benigna)

"In the day time also He led them with a cloud, and all the night through with a light of fire."

This is the third of the trio of hymns beloved by tramps. This one was written by John Henry Newman on board a sailing vessel while it was becalmed for a week in the Straits of Bonifacio. He was ill, and suffering. It was first published in the British Magazine under the title of "The Pillar of the Cloud." In after years Newman refused to state precisely what he meant by the final lines. He declared them to be the result of some "transient" condition of mind. But they doubtless referred to the loss of his own loved ones.

Card. J. H. NEWMAN (1833). Rev. J. B. DYKES, Mus. Doc.

Lead, kind-ly Light, a - mid the encircling gloom,

Lead Thou me on! The night is dark, and I am far from home, Lead Thou me on!

Keep Thou my feet! I do not ask to see

The dis - tant scene; one step e - nough for me.

I was not ever thus, nor pray'd that Thou
Shouldst lead me on;

I loved to choose and see my path; but now
Lead Thou me on.

I loved the garish day, and, spite of fears,
Pride ruled my will: remember not past years.

So long Thy power hath blest me, sure it still Will lead me on,
 O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
 The night is gone;
 And with the morn, those angel faces smile,
 Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile.

Lo, He Comes with Clouds Descending

(St. Thomas)

"Behold He cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see Him, and they also which pierced Him."

This hymn has received somewhat remarkable treatment at the hands of several hymn-writers. Madan put together two stanzas written by Cennick and three written by Chas. Wesley, and the result is the hymn as sung to-day.

J. CENNICK (1752), WESLEY (1758), MADAN (1760).

Lo, He comes with clouds de - scend - ing,

Once for our sal - va - tion slain: Thousand an - gel -

hosts at - tend - ing, Swell the tri - umph of His train;

Every eye shall now behold Him,
 Robed in dreadful majesty;
 Those who set at naught, and sold Him,
 Pierced and nail'd Him to the tree,
 ||: Deeply wailing, :||
 Shall the true MESSIAH see.

Those dead tokens of His Passion
 Still His dazzling Body bears,
 Cause of endless exultation
 To His ransom'd worshippers;
 ||: With what rapture, :||
 Gaze we on those glorious scars!

Yea, Amen, let all adore Thee,
 High on Thine eternal Throne;
 Saviour, take the power and glory;
 Claim the Kingdom for Thine own:
 ||: Alleluia! :||
 Thou shalt reign, and Thou alone.

Lord, Dismiss us with Thy Blessing

(Sicilian Hymn)

"Stablish the thing, O God, that Thou hast wrought in us."

This hymn was written by Dr. Hawker, who always used it to close his service. One day his grandson, who had ideas of his own and who did not know the author of the hymn, said: "Grandfather, I do not altogether like that hymn. . . . I think it might be improved in metre and language, and would be better if made somewhat longer."

"Oh, indeed," the Doctor said, becoming excited. "And pray, Robert, what emendations commend themselves to your precocious wisdom?" The young chap read then to his grandfather his "improved version."

"Crude and flat, sir! Young puppy, it is mine! I wrote that hymn!"

"Oh, I beg your pardon, grandfather, I did not know that. It is a very nice hymn indeed, but — but —" and he started for the door, — "mine is better."

The hymn below was first published in 1774, and elsewhere it has been printed: "Lord, Vouchsafe to us Thy Blessing."

Dr. Hawker (1774).

A large increase shall give,
And multiply the faithful race
Who to thy glory live.

Now then the ceaseless shower
Of gospel blessings send,
And let the soul-converting power
Thy ministers attend.

On multitudes confer
The heart-renewing love
And by the joy of grace prepare
For fuller joys above.

Lord, in the Morning Thou Shalt Hear

(Warwick)

ISAAC WATTS.

S. STANLEY.

LORD, in the . morn - ing Thou shalt hear

My voice as - cend - ing high;

To Thee will I di - rect my pray'r,

To Thee lift up mine eye.

Up to the hills, where CHRIST has gone
 To plead for all His saints,
 Presenting at His FATHER'S throne,
 Our songs and our complaints.

Thou art a GOD, before Whose sight
 The wicked shall not stand;
 Sinner shall ne'er be Thy delight,
 Nor dwell at Thy right hand.

But to Thy house will I resort,
To taste Thy mercies there;
I will frequent Thy holy court,
And worship in Thy fear.

Oh, may the SPIRIT guide my feet,
In ways of righteousness;
Make every path of duty straight,
And plain before my face.

108 Hymns Every Child Should Know

Shall we seek Thee, LORD, in vain?

Shall we seek Thee, LORD, in vain?

LORD, on Thee our souls depend,
In compassion now descend;
Fill our hearts with Thy rich grace,
||: Tune our lips to sing Thy praise. :||

In Thine own appointed way
Now we seek Thee; here we stay;
LORD, we know not how to go,
||: Till a blessing Thou bestow. :||

Comfort those who weep and mourn;
Let the time of joy return;
Those that are cast down, lift up;
||: Make them strong in faith and hope. :||

Grant that all may seek and find
Thee a God supremely kind;
Heal the sick; the captive free;
||: Let us all rejoice in Thee. :||

Love Divine, all Love Excelling

(Beecher)

"Visit me with Thy salvation."

This hymn with its spirit of tenderness does not sound as if written by a descendant of a preacher who was credited with "Long-breathed devotions and bloody prayers," but that is how the progenitor of Charles Wesley was described at the time he preached to Charles Stuart, who came by accident to Wesley's little chapel, while flying to the French coast. The story of the Wesleys, from grandfathers to the famous Methodists, is full of stirring and virile incidents. Much of this story will be found in Duffield's "English Hymns."

CHAS. WESLEY (1747).

J. ZUNDEL (1870).

JE - SUS! Thou art all com - pas - sion,

Pure un - bound - ed love Thou art;

Come, Almighty to deliver,
 Let us all Thy grace receive;
 Suddenly return, and never,
 Never more thy temples leave.
 Thee we would be always blessing,
 Serve Thee as Thy Hosts above;
 Pray, and praise Thee, without ceasing,
 Glory in Thy perfect love.

Finish then Thy new creation,
 Pure and spotless let us be;
 Let us see Thy great salvation,
 Perfectly restored in Thee.
 Changed from glory into glory,
 Till in Heav'n we take our place,
 Till we cast our crowns before Thee,
 Lost in wonder, love, and praise.

My God, how Wonderful Thou Art

(Marlow)

Frederick Faber's hymns are almost too profound for use by average congregations. He has the power of analysis in a large degree, and certain of his lines, belonging to other sacred poems than the one below, are marvels of fine expression and subtle thought.

"The only comfort of our littleness,
 Is that Thou art so great!"

There is distinction of thought in those lines! and they place Faber above his fellows as a hymn, or sacred-poem, writer. Faber came under the influence of Cardinal Newman in his youth, and it is an interesting fact that Newman and Faber drifted into the Catholic Church together, Faber as the pupil of Newman. Thus the Catholic Church gained two truly great men.

Rev. F. W. FABER.

Old English Tune.

My GOD, how won - der - ful Thou art, Thy mer - cy - seat In depths of burn - ing light!

How dread are Thine eternal years,
O Everlasting LORD;
By prostrate spirits day and night
Incessantly adored.

How wonderful, how beautiful,
The sight of Thee must be,
Thine endless wisdom, boundless power,
And awful purity.

Oh, how I fear Thee, living GOD,
With deepest, tenderest fears,
And worship Thee with trembling hope,
And penitential tears.

Yet I may love Thee too, O LORD,
Almighty as Thou art;
For Thou hast stooped to ask of me
The love of my poor heart.

No earthly father loves like Thee;
 No mother e'er so mild,
 Bears and forbears, as Thou hast done
 With me, Thy sinful child.

Father of JESUS, love's reward,
 What rapture will it be,
 Prostrate before Thy throne to lie,
 And ever gaze on Thee!

JOHN RICHARDSON.

My GOD, I love Thee, not be-cause I hope for heav'n there-by, Nor yet be-cause, if

I love not, I must for - ev - er die.

Thou, O my JESUS, Thou didst me
Upon the Cross embrace:
For me didst bear the nails, and spear,
And manifold disgrace.

Then why, O blessèd JESUS CHRIST,
Should I not love Thee well?
Not for the hope of winning Heaven,
Nor of escaping hell;

Not with the hope of gaining aught,
Not seeking a reward;
But as Thyself hast lovèd me,
O ever-loving LORD!

So would I love Thee, dearest LORD,
And in Thy praise will sing;
Solely because Thou art my GOD,
And my Eternal KING.

My Soul, be on thy Guard

(Laban)

The author of this hymn seems to have fallen from grace, according to history, but as this hymn was written after he was compelled to give up his church — he was a Unitarian — for some unworthiness, there is something very suggestive about the text. Doubtless the poor fellow knew well the necessity for being on his guard, having felt himself assailed by "ten thousand foes" frequently.

GEO. HEATH (1781).

DR. LOWELL MASON.

My soul, be on thy guard, Ten thou-sand foes a - rise; And hosts of sin are press - ing hard, To draw thee from the skies.

Oh, watch and fight and pray,
 The battle ne'er give o'er;
 Renew it boldly every day,
 And help divine implore.

Ne'er think the victory won,
 Nor lay thine armor down;
 Thine arduous work will not be done,
 Till thou obtain thy crown.

Fight on, my soul, till death
 Shall bring thee to thy God!
 He'll take thee at thy parting breath,
 Up to His blest abode.

Nearer, my God, to Thee

(Bethany)

"Whom have I in heaven but Thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire in comparison of Thee."

This was President McKinley's favorite hymn, and when dying he was heard faintly to sing it. On the day of his funeral all affairs were stopped for five minutes in many parts of the country, and especially in Canton the world came to a standstill and many sang this hymn during those minutes. The hymn has been criticised because it contains "nothing of Christ," but this criticism has not seemed to impair its usefulness.

 My rest a stone;
 Yet, in my dreams I'd be,
 Nearer, my God, to Thee,

There let the way appear
 Steps up to Heav'n,
 All that Thou sendest me,
 In mercy given;
 Angels to beckon me
 Nearer, my God, to Thee,

Then with my waking thoughts
 Bright with Thy praise,
 Out of my stony griefs

 So by my woes to be
 Nearer, my God, to Thee,
 Nearer to Thee.

New ev'ry Morning is the Love

(Melcombe)

"His compassions fail not; they are new every morning."

The hymn was taken from a poem of sixteen stanzas, first published in the "Christian Year" in 1827.

Rev. JOHN KEBLE (1822).

S. WEBBE.

New mercies, each returning day,
Hover around us while we pray;
New perils past, new sins forgiven,
New thoughts of God, new hopes of Heav'n.

If on our daily course our mind
Be set to hallow all we find,
New treasures still, of countless price,
God will provide for sacrifice.

The trivial round, the common task,
Will furnish all we need to ask,
Room to deny ourselves, a road
To bring us daily nearer God.

Only, O LORD, in Thy dear love
Fit us for perfect rest above;
And help us this, and every day,
To live more nearly as we pray.

Now the Day is Over

(Repose)

"When thou liest down thou shalt not be afraid; yea, thou shalt lie down and thy sleep shall be sweet."

Rev. S. BARING-GOULD (1865).

Sir JOSEPH BARNEY.

The musical score is written on two staves in G major (one sharp) and common time (C). The first staff begins with a piano (p) dynamic marking. The melody consists of eighth and quarter notes. The second staff begins with a forte (f) dynamic marking, followed by a crescendo hairpin, and then returns to piano (p) for the final measure. The lyrics are placed below the notes.

Now the day is o - ver, Night is draw - ing nigh;

Now the darkness gathers,
Stars begin to peep,
Birds, and beasts, and flowers
Soon will be asleep.

JESU, give the weary
Calm and sweet repose:
With Thy tenderest blessing
May mine eyelids close.

Grant to little children
Visions bright of Thee;
Guard the sailors tossing
On the deep blue sea.

Comfort every sufferer
Watching late in pain;
Those who plan some evil
From their sin restrain.

Through the long night watches
May Thine Angels spread
Their white wings above me,
Watching round my bed.

When the morning wakens,
Then may I arise
Pure, and fresh, and sinless
In Thy holy eyes.

Glory to the FATHER,
Glory to the SON,
And to Thee, Blest SPIRIT,
Whilst all ages run.

Oh, Could I Speak the Matchless Worth

(Ariel)

The original beginning of this hymn was "Not of terrestrial mortal themes." It did not find special favor until Dr. Mason put the present tune of Ariel to it. It is an English hymn, but it is America that has made it popular. Unlike many sacred verses it has remained undivorced from its first successful tune, and belongs only to Ariel.

MEDLEY (1789).

Dr. LOWELL MASON.

Oh, could I speak the match-less worth,

Oh, could I sound the glo-ries forth, Which in my

SAVIOUR shine! { I 'd soar, and touch the heav'nly strings }
{ And vie with Ga-briel while he sings, }

In notes al-most di - vine, In notes al-most di - vine.

I'd sing the Precious Blood He spilt
My ransom from the dreadful guilt
Of sin and wrath divine!

I'd sing His glorious righteousness,
In which all-perfect heavenly dress
||: My sou! shall ever shine. :||

I'd sing the characters He bears,
And all the forms of love He wears,
Exalted on His throne:

In loftiest songs of sweetest praise,
I would to everlasting days
||: Make all His glories known. :||

Well — the delightful day will come
When my dear LORD will bring me home,
And I shall see His face:

Then with my SAVIOUR, BROTHER, FRIEND,
A blest eternity I'll spend,
||: Triumphant in His grace. :||

Oh, for a Closer Walk with God

(Martyrdom)

"Oh, that I were as in months past."

This hymn was written at a time when Cowper's melancholy was in abeyance. He nevertheless was so morbid that he felt it sinful to write anything of a secular nature. In all probability had the unhappy poet been forced to think of less emotional matters than his own soul he would have been less hopelessly distraught. One may read his hymns and revel in their genuine inspiration — unless one fully knows the impulse of them, and then they become painful to a sympathetic mind.

WILLIAM COWPER (1772).

Oh, for a clos - er walk with God, A calm and heav - 'nly frame ; A light to shine up - on the road That leads me to the LAMB !

What peaceful hours I once enjoy'd !

How sweet their memory still !

But they have left an aching void

The world can never fill.

Return, O HOLY DOVE, return,
Sweet Messenger of rest:
I hate the sins that made Thee mourn,
And drove Thee from my breast.

The dearest idol I have known,
Whate'er that idol be,
Help me to tear it from Thy Throne,
And worship only Thee.

So shall my walk be close with GOD,
Calm and serene my frame;
So purer light shall mark the road
That leads me to the LAMB.

Oh, for a Thousand Tongues to Sing

(Selby)

"When ye glorify the Lord, exalt Him as much as ye can: for even yet will He much exceed: and when ye exalt Him, put forth all your strength, and not be weary: for ye can never go far enough."

This is the first hymn in the Methodist hymnal, and Wesley wrote it to commemorate the anniversary of his conversion. He was ill at the time with pleurisy. It was the day of Pentecost, and Charles Wesley's conversion took place then, according to Duffield, and the hymn was made one year from that time.

CHAS. WESLEY (May 21, 1739).

 Assist me to proclaim
 And spread through all the earth abroad
 The honors of Thy Name.

O Happy Day that Fixed my Choice

Philip Doddridge was the twentieth child of his parents. He wrote some fairly good hymns, chiefly on the subject of his own sermons. The hymn below has been a marked favorite among American Methodists for years, and is especially used at revival times.

PHILIP DODDRIDGE (1755).

 Fixed on this blissful centre, rest;
 Nor ever from thy LORD depart,
 With Him of every good possessed. Cho.

 That vow renewed shall daily hear,
 Till in life's latest hour I bow,
 And bless in death a bond so dear. Cho.

But in this world of sin,
Where meek souls will receive him still,
The dear CHRIST enters in.

O holy CHILD of Bethlehem!
 Descend to us, we pray;
 Cast out our sin, and enter in,
 Be born in us to-day.
 We hear the Christmas angels
 The great glad tidings tell;
 O come to us, abide with us,

One Sweetly Solemn Thought

(Jewett)

This hymn's story comes from the pen of Phoebe Cary. She wrote to Mary Clemmer Ames: "I enclose the hymn and the story for you, not because I am vain of the notice, but because I thought you would feel a peculiar interest in them when you knew the hymn was written eighteen years ago (1852) in your house. I composed it in the little back third-story bedroom one Sunday morning after coming from church, and it makes me happy to think that any word I could say has done a little good in the world." This verse has been corrupted to suit the demands of this musical setting.

Crossed ere we reach the light.

JESUS, confirm my trust;
Strengthen the hand of faith
To feel Thee, when I stand
Upon the shore of death.
Be near me when my feet
Are slipping o'er the brink,
For I am nearer home,
Perhaps, than now I think.

Only an Armor-Bearer*

"Now it came to pass upon a day, that Jonathan, the son of Saul, said unto the young man that bare his armor, Come, and let us go over to the Philistine's garrison that is on the other side; it may be that the Lord will work for us; for there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few. And his armor-bearer said unto him, Do all that is in thine heart: turn thee; behold, I am with thee according to thine heart. And Jonathan climbed up upon his hands and upon his feet, and his armor-bearer after him: and they fell before Jonathan; and his armor-bearer slew after him. So the Lord saved Israel that day, and the battle passed over unto Bethaven."

Onward, Christian Soldiers

(St. Gertrude)

"Be strong and of good courage . . . And the Lord, He it is that doth go before thee."

The children of Baring-Gould's Sunday-school had to walk from one village to another on an occasion when two schools were to join forces for the day. The author sat up nearly all night to compose something that would do better to march by than anything he had in mind. Gould will doubtless be longest known by these words, just as Sullivan is likely to remain longest in the minds of people because of the music he set to them, though neither man valued his performance in the making of this hymn, as he valued his other work.

REV. S. BARING-GOULD (1865).

O Paradise! O Paradise!

(Longings)

"The Paradise of God."

We have a combination of music and poetry in this hymn. It is very beautiful from both points of view. There was a Mendelssohn scholarship contended for, in which Sullivan and Barnby were close competitors. It was Sullivan who won the prize, but in musical excellence there was not much to choose between them. At eight years of age Sullivan had composed "By the Waters of Babylon." His musical genius was inherited, and he could play all the musical instruments used in his father's band. Barnby's hymn-tunes seem to float about unnamed, being published erratically as to their verse setting. The editors of "The Methodist Hymn-book" seem to have been the only ones who have tried to rectify this mistake.

O Paradise! O Paradise!

The world is growing old;

Who would not be at rest and free

Where love is never cold;

Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise! O Paradise!
'Tis weary waiting here;
I long to be where JESUS is,
To feel, to see Him near;
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise! O Paradise!
I want to sin no more,
I want to be as pure on earth
As on Thy spotless shore;
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise! O Paradise!
I greatly long to see
The special place my dearest LORD
In love prepares for me;

Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

LORD JESU, King of Paradise,
O keep me in Thy love,
And guide me to that happy land
Of perfect rest above;
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

Pull for the Shore *

"Therefore, my beloved, . . . work out your own salvation with fear and trembling."

On one occasion, when Mr. Moody was returning from Europe, the propelling shaft of the steamer broke, and the ship's company was compelled to await repairs, during which time no word could be got to either shore. Mrs. Moody, who was greatly distracted, was staying in Mr. Sankey's house. Bliss seems to have written this under the inspiration of the anxiety, although this is partly surmise, because the incident is only told à propos of the song, and not as a reason for its composition.

Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me!

(Rock of Ages)

"That rock was Christ."

Augustus Toplady attended a meeting in a barn in Ireland, and was "converted." He said: "Strange that I, who had so long sat under the means in England, should be brought right unto God in an obscure part of Ireland, midst a handful of people met together in a barn, and by the ministry of one who could hardly spell his own name!" It was afterward that he wrote this hymn. We are told that when the Prince Consort was dying he constantly repeated these verses, remarking: "If in this hour I had only my worldly honors and dignities to depend upon I should be poor indeed."

and the blood, From Thy wound-ed side that flow'd,

Not the labors of my hands
Can fulfil Thy law's demands;
Could my zeal no respite know,
Could my tears forever flow,
All for sin could not atone;
Thou must save, and Thou alone.

Nothing in my hand I bring,
Simply to Thy Cross I cling;
Naked, come to Thee for dress;
Helpless, look to Thee for grace;
Foul, I to the Fountain fly;
Wash me, SAVIOUR, or I die.

While I draw this fleeting breath,
When my eyelids close in death,
When I soar through tracts unknown,
See Thee on Thy Judgment Throne;
Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee.

Saviour, Again to Thy Dear Name we Raise

(Pax Dei)

"The Lord shall give His people the blessing of peace."

This hymn was written for a festival occasion at Nantwich, Cheshire, in 1862, and in its original form it had ten stanzas.

Rev. J. ELLERTON (1866). Rev. J. B. DYKES, Mus. Doc.

SA-VIOUR, a - gain to Thy dear name we raise

With one ac - cord our part - ing hymn of praise;

We stand to bless Thee ere our wor-ship cease,

Then, low - ly kneeling, wait Thy word of peace

Grant us Thy peace upon our homeward way ;
With Thee began, with Thee shall end the day ;
Guard Thou the lips from sin, the hearts from shame,
That in this house have call'd upon Thy Name.

Grant us Thy peace, LORD, through the coming night;
Turn Thou for us its darkness into light;
From harm and danger keep Thy children free,
For dark and light are both alike to Thee.

Grant us Thy peace throughout our earthly life,
Our balm in sorrow, and our stay in strife;
Then, when Thy voice shall bid our conflict cease,
Call us, O LORD, to Thine eternal peace.

Saviour, Source of every Blessing

R. ROBINSON (1758). From a Tune of the
Adapted by Rev. H. B. WHITNEY. Roman Catholic Church.

SAV-IOUR, source of ev - 'ry bless - ing, Tune my heart to grate-ful lays; Streams of mer-cy nev-er

ceas-ing Call for cease-less songs of praise.

Teach me some melodious measure,
Sung by raptured saints above;
Fill my soul with sacred pleasure,
While I sing redeeming love.

Thou didst seek me when a stranger,
Wandering from the fold of God;
Thou, to save my soul from danger,
Didst redeem me with Thy Blood.

By Thy hand restored, defended,
Safe through life thus far I've come;
Safe, O LORD, when life is ended,
Bring me to my heavenly home.

Shall we Gather at the River?*

This was written on a hot afternoon in July, in 1864, while Dr. Lowry lived in Eliot Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. After he had written the words he composed the tune immediately, making use of his parlor organ. Dr. Lowry never thought very much of the result as a musical composition, and when it had become famous as a Sunday-school hymn he declared it to be "brass-band music, with a march movement," which accounted largely for its popularity. He heard it sung once, however, by a vast London congregation in the Old Bailey, where a convention of Sunday-school workers was being held. As he was leaving, the chairman of the meeting announced that the author of this hymn was present, and asked him to lead in the singing of it. A tremendous enthusiasm followed, which made the good doctor think somewhat better of his Eliot Place inspiration.

On the bosom of the river,
Where the SAVIOUR-KING we own,
We shall meet and sorrow never,

Lay we every burden down;
Grace, our spirits will deliver,
And provide a robe and crown. Cho.

Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus

(Webb)

"Quit you like men: be strong."

This is distinctly an American hymn. The one authentic account of it is to be found complete in Duffield's story of hymns. This one was suggested by a sermon of the Rev. Dudley A. Tyng, in connection with this young preacher's dying words: "Stand up for Jesus." Tyng died most tragically, and these verses were written by his dearest friend.

Rev. G. DUFFIELD (1858).

G. J. WEBB.

Stand up, stand up for JE - SUS, Ye sol - diers of the Cross! Lift high His roy - al ban - ner,

It must not suf - fer loss. From vic - tory un - to vic-tory His ar-my shall He lead; Till ev - 'ry

foe is vanquished, and CHRIST is LORD in - deed.

Stand up! — stand up for JESUS!

The solemn watchword hear;

If while ye sleep He suffers,

Away with shame and fear;

Where'er ye meet with evil,

Within you or without,

Charge for the GOD of battle

And put the foe to rout.

Stand up! — stand up for JESUS!

The trumpet call obey;

Forth to the mighty conflict

In this, His glorious day.

Ye that are men now serve Him

Against unnumber'd foes;

Let courage rise with danger

And strength to strength oppose.

Stand up! — stand up for JESUS!

Stand in His strength alone;

The arm of flesh will fail you,

Ye dare not trust your own.

Put on the Gospel armor,
 Each piece put on with prayer;
 When duty calls or danger
 Be never wanting there!

Stand up!—stand up for JESUS!
 The strife will not be long;
 This day the noise of battle,
 The next, the victor's song.
 To him that overcometh,
 A crown of life shall be;
 He with the KING OF GLORY
 Shall reign eternally.

Sun of my Soul, Thou Saviour Dear

"Abide with us."

Rev. JOHN KEBLE (1820).

German.

Sun of my soul, Thou SAV - IOUR dear,

It is not night if Thou be near.

Oh, may no earth-born cloud a - rise

To hide Thee from Thy ser-vant's eyes.

When the soft dews of kindly sleep
My wearied eyelids gently steep,
Be my last thought, how sweet to rest
Forever on my SAVIOUR's breast.

Abide with me from morn till eve,
For without Thee I cannot live;
Abide with me when night is nigh
For without Thee I dare not die.

If some poor wand'ring child of Thine
Have spurn'd to-day the voice Divine
Now, LORD, the gracious work begin;
Let him no more lie down in sin.

Watch by the sick; enrich the poor
With blessings from Thy boundless store;
Be every mourner's sleep to-night
Like infant's slumbers, pure and light.

Come near and bless us when we wake,
 Ere through the world our way we take;
 Till in the ocean of Thy love
 We lose ourselves in Heav'n above.

And since He bids me seek His face,

I'll cast on Him my every care,
And wait for thee, sweet hour of prayer!

Sweet hour of prayer! sweet hour of prayer!
May I thy consolation share,
Till from mount Pisgah's lofty height
I view my home and take my flight:
This robe of flesh I'll drop and rise
To seize the everlasting prize;
And shout while passing through the air,
Farewell, farewell, sweet hour of prayer!

Sweet the Moments, Rich in Blessing

(Turnau)

"Unto you therefore which believe He is precious."

This was evolved from a crude set of verses beginning, "While my JESUS I'm possessing." Lord Ferrers, the brother of the author, was thrown into the Tower of London for the murder of his steward, and was condemned to be hanged. This darkened all Shirley's life, but he wrote much that signified a patient soul. Shirley preached the latter part of his life, while sitting in a chair to which he was confined by dropsy.

BACH.

Sweet the mo-ments, rich in bless-ing, Which before the Cross I spend; Life and health and peace pos-sess-ing, Through the sin-ners' dying FRIEND.

Here I rest forever viewing
 Mercy pour'd in streams of blood;
 Precious drops, my soul bedewing,
 Plead and claim my peace with God.

Truly blessèd is the station,
 Low before His Cross to lie,
 Whilst I see Divine compassion
 Beaming in His languid Eye.

LORD, in ceaseless contemplation
 Fix my thankful heart on Thee
 Till I taste Thy full salvation,
 And Thy unveil'd glory see.

Tell me the Old, Old Story

"Tell them how great things the Lord hath done."

This hymn has been translated and re-translated into various languages. The music was written in a stage-coach on a sweltering afternoon, between Glen Falls House and the Crawford House, in the White Mountains, and was sung the same evening in the hotel parlors. Nobody concerned ever expected it to have the vogue that it did have a little later.

Tell me the story slowly,
That I may take it in —
That wonderful redemption,
God's remedy for sin.
Tell me the story often
For I forget so soon,
The early dew of morning
Has passed away at noon. Cho.

Tell me the story softly,
With earnest tones and grave;
Remember! I'm the sinner,
Whom JESUS came to save;

Tell me that story always,
If you would really be,
In any time of trouble,
A comforter to me. Cho.

Tell me the same old story,
When you have cause to fear
That this world's empty glory
Is costing me too dear.
Yes, and when that world's glory
Is dawning on my soul,
Tell me the old, old story,
"CHRIST JESUS makes thee whole." Cho.

There is a Fountain Filled with Blood

(Arlington)

"In that day shall be a fountain opened ... for sin and for uncleanness."

Cowper did not make this hymn originally read: "And there have I, as vile as he, washed all my sins away," but many versions have it so. This version of the tune is the familiar one, but the original, written by Arne, was in 3, common metre, and was the tune to which the words were properly adapted. It is a revival favorite of a former time, before the Moody and Sankey songs became popular.

neath that flood Lose all their guil - ty stains.

The dying thief rejoiced to see
That fountain in his day;
And there may I, as vile as he,
Wash all my sins away.

Dear, dying LAMB, Thy precious Blood
Shall never lose its power,
Till all the ransom'd Church of GOD
Be saved to sin no more.

E'er since by faith I saw the stream
Thy flowing Wounds supply
Redeeming love has been my theme,
And shall be till I die.

Then in a nobler, sweeter song,
I'll sing Thy power to save,
When this poor lisping, stammering tongue
Lies silent in the grave.

LORD, I believe Thou hast prepared,
Unworthy though I be,
For me a blood-bought, free reward,
A golden harp for me.

'Tis strung and tuned for endless years,
And form'd by power Divine,
To sound in GOD the FATHER'S Ears
No other name but Thine.

There's a Land that is Fairer than Day *

"The ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads."

This hymn was written in about thirty minutes, music and all. Webster was a melancholy sort of man, and Bennett, who was associated with him in getting out song-books, found that his confrere was better to be kept busy. One day Webster came in where Bennett was and stood by the stove moodily, with his back to Bennett. "What's the matter now?" Bennett asked. "Oh, nothing. It will be all right by and by," he said, and Bennett was impressed by the last words, and on the instant wrote the hymn verses. They pleased Webster and he stood by the stove and wrote the music.

To our bountiful FATHER above,
 We will offer our tribute of praise,
 For the glorious gift of his love,
 And the blessings that hallow our days. Cho.

There Were Ninety and Nine *

The manner in which this song was set to music excellently demonstrates one of the peculiar elements of real genius — spontaneity. There is no doubt that Ira Sankey was a genius in his chosen line. He found the words of this hymn in a newspaper on a train between Glasgow and Edinburgh. The next day at the close of a meeting Mr. Moody asked Mr. Sankey if he had not something to sing appropriate to the subject of the talk which had just been given upon "the good Shepherd." Sankey offered a prayer in order to gain a moment for thought, as he had already sung, congregationally, everything appropriate to the occasion. These words were in his mind, and while he prayed he tried to form something like a tune. When he went to the organ, the tune evolved itself just as it stands to-day. It is superior in every way to the songs of P. P. Bliss, and, in a different manner, it has aroused revivals among thousands.

“LORD, Thou hast here Thy ninety and nine;
Are they not enough for Thee?”
But the SHEPHERD made answer: “This of mine

Has wandered away from me,
And although the road be rough and steep,
I go to the desert to find my sheep."

But none of the ransomed ever knew
How deep were the waters crossed;
Nor how dark was the night the LORD passed through
Ere He found His sheep that was lost.
Out on the desert He heard its cry,—
Sick and helpless and ready to die.

"LORD, whence are those blood-drops all the way
That mark out the mountain's track?"

"They were shed for one who had gone astray Ere the SHEPHERD could bring him back."

"LORD, whence are Thy hands so rent and torn?"

"They are pierced to-night by many a thorn."

But all through the mountains, thunder-riven,
And up from the rocky steep,
There rose a glad cry to the gate of Heaven,
"Rejoice! I have found My sheep!"
And the Angels echoed around the throne,
"Rejoice! for the LORD brings back His own!"

The Son of God goes Forth to War

Tune, Chesterfield.

The SON of GOD goes forth to war,
A kingly crown to gain;
His blood-red banner streams afar:
Who follows in his train?

Who best can drink his cup of woe,
Triumphant over pain,
Who patient bears his cross below,
He follows in His train.

The Martyr first, whose eagle eye
Could pierce beyond the grave;

Who saw his MASTER in the sky,
And call'd on Him to save.

Like Him, with pardon on his tongue
In midst of mortal pain,
He pray'd for them that did the wrong;
Who follows in his train?

A glorious band, the chosen few
On whom the SPIRIT came,
Twelve valiant Saints, their hope they knew,
And mock'd the cross and flame.

They met the tyrant's brandish'd steel,
The lion's gory mane,
They bow'd their necks, the death to feel;
Who follows in their train?

A noble army, men and boys,
The matron and the maid,
Around the SAVIOUR'S Throne rejoice
In robes of light array'd.

They climb'd the steep ascent of Heav'n
Through peril, toil, and pain;
O GOD, to us may grace be given
To follow in their train.

Be present, awful FATHER,
 To give away this bride,
 As Eve Thou gav'st to Adam
 Out of his own pierced side.

Be present, SON of Mary,
 To join their loving hands,
 As Thou didst bind two natures
 In Thine Eternal bands.

Be present, Holiest SPIRIT,
 To bless them as they kneel,
 As Thou for CHRIST, the Bridegroom,
 The Heavenly Spouse dost seal.

O spread Thy pure Wing o'er them,
 Let no ill power find place,
 When onward to Thine Altar
 The hallow'd path they trace.

To cast their crowns before Thee
 In perfect sacrifice,
 Till to the home of gladness
 With CHRIST's own Bride thy rise.

While Shepherds Watched their Flocks by Night

(Winchester)

"Unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

NATHAN TATE (1703).

GEO. KIRBYE.

While shep-herds watched their flocks by night, All seat-ed on the ground, The An-gel of the LORD came down, And glo-ry shone a-round.

“Fear not,” said He, for mighty dread
Had seized their troubled mind;
“Glad tidings of great joy I bring
To you and all mankind.

“To you in David’s town, this day
Is born of David’s line
A Saviour who is CHRIST the LORD;
And this shall be the sign.

“The heavenly Babe you there shall find
To human view display’d,
All meanly wrapped in swathing bands,
And in a manger laid.”

Thus spake the seraph; and forthwith
Appear’d a shining throng
Of Angels praising GOD, who thus Address’d their joyful song:

“All glory be to GOD on high,
And to the earth be peace;
Good will henceforth from Heav’n to men
Begin and never cease.”

APPENDIX

The music and words to the following hymns have been especially loaned for this book — the music being composed for the purpose — in order that hymns, distinctively American both in verse and music, might be presented. There is much that is fine and that is American to be found elsewhere, but Mr. Gilder, Mr. Lanier, and John Hay have made verses peculiarly suitable and characteristic, and the Rev. Hobart B. Whitney's music admirably reflects the spirit of the text, particularly in the case of Mr. Lanier's verses.

We thank Thee for each mighty one

We thank Thee for the love divine
Made real in every saint of Thine;
That boundless love itself that gives

Of prophets at Thy throne who bowed.

That like Thy saints we may endure;
Forever through Thy servants, LORD,
Send Thou Thy light, Thy love, Thy word.
